Moore Blatch
refreshes technology with £1/4m funding from Lombard

MOORE BLATCH

Moore Blatch is a highly successful law firm with four offices based in the South of England. With specialist teams for various sectors, its strengths lie in corporate and commercial, property dispute, personal injury and private client services.

Faced with an aging IT estate in need of updating, Moore Blatch evaluated Lombard Technology Services among a number of financial providers in order to secure £1/4m of funding for a mix of technology and related costs including server, desktop, laptops and storage equipment. John Davies, Partner and Chief Executive at Moore Blatch Resolve, explains, "We chose to work with Lombard as the flexibilities of its offering made the whole process easier, with just one source of finance to deal with to fund all the various technology equipment. Its monthly leasing payments reflected the future value of the asset, and it became a cost-effective proposition." The agreement also meant that Lombard is responsible for the returned assets at the end of lease and WEEE (Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment) Directive compliant disposal.

Lombard's dedicated technology services team utilised its expertise to provide a solution that was specifically tailored for the customer. Simon Williams, Relationship Manager at Lombard Technology Services, explains, "In addition to the funding we provided a Pre-Lease Management Facility, which outsources the payment and management of multiple technology supplier invoices which is then added to a single lease. This approach to funding key projects not only removes a source of pressure and enables focus on other project priorities, but also enhances the supplier relationship with each supplier paid promptly on behalf of the customer."

Lombard's funding enhanced operational efficiency, supported strong supplier relationships and effective budgeting.
